

WALL STREET
JOURNAL

STATINTL

JUN 3 1966

SENATE SECURITY tightens a bit, following the well-publicized extractions from Sen. Dodd's files. A Senator's aide pushing a cart full of papers out of a Senate office building was stopped by a guard who refused to believe the papers were routine: "That's what those Dodd people said." He demanded the aide's credentials, called the Senator's office to check the story.